The Growth Portfolio

Portfolio Objective:

The primary objective of the Growth Focus portfolio is to invest in a portfolio of equities with an emphasis on returns earned primarily through capital appreciation. There will be risk to capital.

Investment Advisor:

The Investment Advisor is RBC Investment Management (Caribbean) Limited. The Investment Advisor provides advice on portfolio allocation, ETF selection and portfolio rebalancing.

Portfolio Strategy:

The strategy provides a diversified exposure to USD-denominated equities using Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs). The selection of ETFs will be primarily equity ETFs with a strong focus on high growth sectors and companies. The equity ETFs held will include small and mid-sized companies that are expected to grow faster than average over time, albeit with a higher level of volatility than large companies. Small and medium-sized companies generally do not pay much by way of dividends and as such most of the return acheived will be via price appreciation.

Who should invest?

Investors seeking higher returns and those who can withstand a moderate level of risk. There is risk to capital, however, over the long-term this portfolio should outperform deposits and other short-term instruments. It is recommended investors have an investment time horizon of at least 5 years.

Market Outlook:

Growth in the U.S. was surprisingly positive in Q3 (+2.6%) after contractions in both Q1 and Q2. Consumer spending slowed but remained positive while the trade deficit narrowed as imports fell sharply in the face of waning demand. The Federal Reserve continued its tightening with a 75 bps increase in rates in September 2022 – its third straight consecutive increase of this magnitude since March 2022. The Federal Funds rate now stands at 3%-3.25% and consensus expectation now is for this to reach 4.25%-4.50% by year end, an upward revision from 3.25% to 3.5% in Q2. The 10-year U.S. Treasury-Bill rate has raced to 4% in response. While headline inflation crept down to 8.2% in September versus 9.1% in June, this is still unacceptably high, and we expect that the Federal Reserve will continue to raise rates aggressively, particularly as the labour market has been resilient. With the Russia/Ukraine war dragging on and an upcoming winter season in Europe, the geopolitical risks remain high. Markets have now turned their attention to an expected recession in 2023, the magnitude of which will depend largely on the severity of the impact on the job market. With unemployment at 3.5%, the economy can withstand some level of job losses, however, this is a slippery slope and will be a very difficult balancing act for the Federal Reserve. The S&P 500 contracted a further 5.28% in Q3, following a 16.45% decline in Q2. Elevated inflation and recession fears continued from Q2 leaving all but two of the S&P 500 sectors in the red in Q3. As evidence of an economic slowdown mounts, investors have focused on Q3 results to glean the extent of impact on each company, with particular focus on the outlooks given. It would not be unexpected to see most companies impacted by reduced demand, higher margins and negative currency effects from the strong U.S. dollar. Geopolitical risks aside, the economic picture has become a bit clearer in terms of consensus around an expected recession in 2023 however, differences remain as to the expected severity.
